

Florence Bouvret

Originally trained as a chemical engineer in France, Florence Bouvret completed her studies with a Master on environment and development and a diploma in Management in Belgium. She has worked as a consultant on gender issues and environmental issues for several years before joining the European Commission in July 2006. She has been working in the Scientific Culture and Gender Issues Unit (formerly known as Women and Science) ever since, in charge of project management, public procurement, the Helsinki Group (meeting of the Member States and gender experts at national levels), and policy aspects on gender issues in science.